

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Dover Downs Hotel & Casino to host Sustain 2016 conference

Hospitality leaders from throughout the mid-Atlantic will converge on Dover Downs Hotel & Casino March 14-15, 2016 for the annual Sustain 2016 conference, focusing on green strategies and marketing to the next generation of consumers.

As home to thousands of hotels and restaurants in major metropolitan areas and their surrounding suburbs, the mid-Atlantic hospitality industry produces thousands of tons of waste each year. Sustain 2016 is designed to gather new ideas for business leaders on recycling, energy saving, sustainability and company strategies moving forward.

"This conference engages multiple conversations with our peers to understand what we can do better," said Ed Sutor, Dover Downs Hotel & Casino's president and CEO and chair of Dover Downs' Conference Working Group. "We want to work and learn with other key decision makers and directors in our area to understand what they're doing right and how we can further our mission of being great stewards of the environment and community that supports us."

Attendees will have three tracts of activities to choose from: Culture, Marketing and Sustainability. Each visitor can attend any of the workshops and other activities within any of the tracts. Topics will include introduction of new products, green training programs and advice on how to engage millennials – the key generation of consumers.

"This conference is important for all stakeholders involved and especially hoteliers. This is a wonderful opportunity," said Paul Rada, Chairman of the Board of the Delaware Hotel and Lodging Association and General Manager – Clarion Belle Hotel. "It is an important investment for broadening the marketability of your property to the millennial market. For much less than it would otherwise cost, hoteliers will be able to interact with, and learn from, experts with proven track records of developing and implementing marketing and social media strategies that have expanded brand recognition and increased their client's bookings."
